Fairfax, VA -- The Republican Party of Virginia has announced that it will be forming a new small business coalition to reach out and promote Republican principles within the business community.

RPV Chairman, Pat Mullins announced Friday that Paul A. Miller, Chairman & CEO of Miller/Wenhold Capitol Strategies, LLC will be the new Chairman of the Small Business Coalition.

The Republican Party of Virginia has announced that it will be forming a new small business coalition to reach out and promote Republican principles within the business community. Businesses in the Commonwealth understand that a thriving economy is based on the adherence to free market principles, and therefore, the Republican Party is a natural home for business leaders who feel that the massive governmental overreach advanced by Democrats in Washington and Richmond is threatening their livelihood.

The RPV Small Business Coalition will be instrumental in garnering support from the business community for the GOP. Furthermore, the Coalition will be seeking input from business leaders across the Commonwealth on ways the Republican Party can be more attentive to small business needs. "Paul has an extensive background when it comes to understanding and representing small business interests," said Pat Mullins, Chairman, Republican Party of Virginia. "He is a dedicated Republican who understands what it takes to grow the Party and expand our outreach to the business community," Pat continued.

Over the next few months, the RPV Small Business Coalition will be implementing an aggressive plan to keep business owners up to date about what Republican leaders in Washington and Richmond are doing to help ensure the Commonwealth is the top state for small businesses.

"It is an honor to be part of the effort to ensure that small businesses have a voice within the Republican Party. I look forward to helping grow the Virginia GOP," Paul stated.
